USE OF PIGMENTED RETINAL EPITHELIAL CELLS FOR CREATION OF AN IMMUNE PRIVILEGE SITE

1. INTRODUCTION

5 The present invention relates to a novel in vivo method for creation of a localized immunosuppressive environment in tissue. The method involves the transplanting of pigmented retinal epithelial cells into a mammal thereby producing a localized immunosuppressive environment. The transplanted
10 pigmented retinal epithelial cells may also be used to produce therapeutic proteins or other biologically active molecules that may be useful in treatment of diseases.

2. BACKGROUND OF THE INVENTION

15 Certain chronic diseases result in the destruction of functional cells in affected organs. Mammals with such diseases are frequently unable to produce proteins or hormones necessary to maintain normal physiological function. In such instances, transplantation of healthy organs or cells
20 into the affected mammal may alleviate the symptoms of the disease. The transplantation of cells and tissues is being utilized therapeutically in a wide range of disorders including but not limited to cystic fibrosis (lungs), kidney failure, degenerative heart diseases, diabetes,
25 neurodegenerative disorders, liver failure and pancreatic failure.

Unfortunately, such transplants are often rejected by the body due to an immune response initiated in response to the foreign tissue or cells. Presently, the only recourse to 30 prevent the rejection of the transplanted tissue is to administer immunosuppressive agents, but the individual is placed at medical risk making the immunosuppressant therapy itself more of a liability than a benefit in some cases. Therefore, the benefits of transplantation have been limited
35 by the serious side effects of systemic immunosuppression, which is necessary if successful transplantation is to be achieved in humans.
